AT WAIPAHU

A Gathering Place for Waipahu

Place names can convey a story and connect us to our past. Our newest community is named Keawalau, which is a traditional name for Pu'uloa (Pearl Harbor). When translated, Keawalau means "the many bays," paying homage to the interconnected systems of waters and lands that converge and create a place rich in resources.

Keawalau is proposed to benefit Waipahu residents in many ways. Once completed, Keawalau offers a diverse retail experience made up of small-scale shops, eateries, essential services and outdoor gathering spaces. It will also provide approximately 500 affordable rental housing units for 'ohana and kūpuna.

Currently in the planning phase, this family-friendly community celebrates Waipahu's rich and diverse history while serving as a revitalized hub for Waipahu to build new connections—to learn from, care for and enjoy the place we call home.

Final design subject to revision and final approval.

Affordable Housing

Who are we talking about?

Each year, the state of Hawai'i publishes affordable housing rates based upon income levels, family sizes and market pricing of housing. With housing prices skyrocketing, many kama'āina families are struggling to find homes they can afford. At Keawalau, all units will be rented to families and seniors earning from 30% to 60% of area median income. Here are just a few average salaries that fit within that range and will qualify to live in this new community.

"Keawalau will help local families by providing affordable, workforce housing at rates limited by the state for 60 years."
